

Mobile Digital Video Recorder (MDVR) Frequently Asked Questions

How long does the MDVR recording time last?

Recording last 80-100 hours.

How many cameras are included?

There are three cameras in the package, and a further may be purchased separately.

What upgrades are available with the MDVR?

The following upgrades are available:

- Passive GPS — Records and overlays latitude, longitude, speed and heading.
- Wireless downloading — With our Lan Server box, the recorded information can be wirelessly downloaded.
- Dual Recording — With our CF recorder, you can record to the HDD and CF card simultaneously.
- Sensor markup — Record as an overly amber lights, stop arm, backup, brakes, right and left hand turns.

What prompts the MDVR system to record?

The MDVR begins recording 10 seconds after the vehicle starts, and recording is continuous.

Can the MDVR continue recording after the vehicle is turned off?

Yes, there is a time delay feature which may be set to record for 5, 10, 20, 30 or 60 minutes after the vehicle has been turned off.

Can you still see events recorded in the dark?

Yes. The camera includes internal LED lighting.

Is there audio?

The MDVR has one audio output channel which may be turned off or on.

How do you locate an event?

An event is generated every time the vehicle is turned on, creating a time schedule. The event can be located by the event listing. The driver also has a panic button which may be used to mark an event. When the panic button is used, the event is listed as an emergency event.

Who handles installation of the MDVR?

The Zentinel installer will train your mechanic on site.

How do you view an event?

Remote viewing is easy with proprietary software, which protects its authenticity. Events may also be reviewed on a TV through the RCA jack.

How do you share a recorded event?

Using your computer, the footage file may be burned to a CD or DVD, placed on a server or networked computer, or even emailed.

Can I take a snapshot?

A snapshot of a particular frame may be made and also emailed.